E-CONFERENCE THEME

Nature is the fundamental infrastructure supporting life on earth. Biodiversity, the variety of life on earth, is vital to social and economic development, and is indeed fundamental to our survival. Over the years, retrospective wisdom and the development experience have guided us in favors of the commonsensical understanding that protecting the variety of life forms and their infinitely complex interactions form the very basis for long-lasting and inclusive development. In other words, environment, or more specifically biodiversity and its invaluable and often irreplaceable ecosystem services, from the air we breathe to the water we drink, are the very foundation on which viable long-term development rests.

Health is, therefore one of the most important indicators of sustainable development. Biodiversity is the foundation for human health. By securing the life-sustaining goods and services which biodiversity provides to us, the conservation and sustainable use of biodiversity can provide significant benefits to our health.

The theme of this e- Conference is Interdisciplinary innovations in Socio-economic Environment, Biodiversity Conservation through Sustainable Development. The theme will enable academicians, research scholars, professionals and students to showcase their research and innovational outcomes in the field of socio-economic environment and biodiversity conservation. This will also gleam the latest innovation and technology towards conserving, sustaining and managing the built environment. The conference will also allow participants to form research linkages and collaborations for sustainable development.
